ABOUT THIS REPORT

The report below is based on how you responded. The environment in which you completed the assessment process, and your frame of mind at the time, may have influenced how you responded.

The report compares your responses to a success profile that shows the key capabilities that can help someone do well in a role, organization, or environment. It also shows your results for broader capabilities related to success at work. Your assessment results can help you consider how you typically approach work, reflect on your success in your current situation, and plan your longer-term development for a future role or situation.

This report has been generated automatically based only on your assessment responses. There may be other very important information about you that is not captured in this report. This information may also be taken into account when using the assessment results.

HOW TO READ THIS REPORT

The report starts with an overview of how results are displayed.

SUMMARY

This section provides a summary of your results.

BEHAVIORAL COMPETENCIES

Competencies are skills and behaviors required for success that can be observed.

TRAITS

Traits are personality characteristics that have a strong influence on behavior.

DRIVERS

Drivers are preferences, values, and motivations that influence aspirations.

DEVELOPMENT PLANNING

Development suggestions are included here. This section provides development suggestions for specific capabilities that are likely to support your current role or your aspirations.

DEFINITIONS

All the capabilities reported are listed here, with definitions for reference.

HOW TO READ THIS REPORT

This section provides an overview of the information presented and symbols shown in the report. You may find it helpful to read this section before reviewing your results. It can also be a useful reference page to return to if you have questions as you read the report.

SUCCESS PROFILE

The success profile shows the key capabilities that can help someone do well in a role, organization, or environment.

SCALES

Assessment results are reported on a 1 to 10 scale, with 10 being the more favorable, or better, end of the scale. If an ideal range is shown, a score within the range is more favorable than either end of the scale.

ASSESSMENT RESULT

Bars are used to illustrate assessment results.

IDEAL RANGE

Different situations require capabilities to be demonstrated in different ways. Some scales show an ideal score range for the success profile. The closer a score is to the ideal range, the more it suggests alignment with the success profile.

KEY DEVELOPMENT OPPORTUNITY

The lowest scoring capabilities are shown. These may benefit from some development.

SUMMARY

SUCCESS PROFILE: ACCOUNT MANAGER RETAIL III

This summary indicates your assessment results compared with the success profile capabilities. It can help you reflect on how you typically approach work, and on your strengths and development needs.

People who meet or exceed the profile in most areas are more likely to be engaged and perform well. The subsequent sections report all your assessment results so that you can consider any other capabilities that you want to develop in the longer-term.

TRAITS

Traits are personality characteristics that exert a strong influence on behavior. Depending on the role, and the context for that role, some traits will be more critical for success than others. Traits are core to who you are, but by becoming self-aware and seeking development opportunities, you can shape how you express your traits.

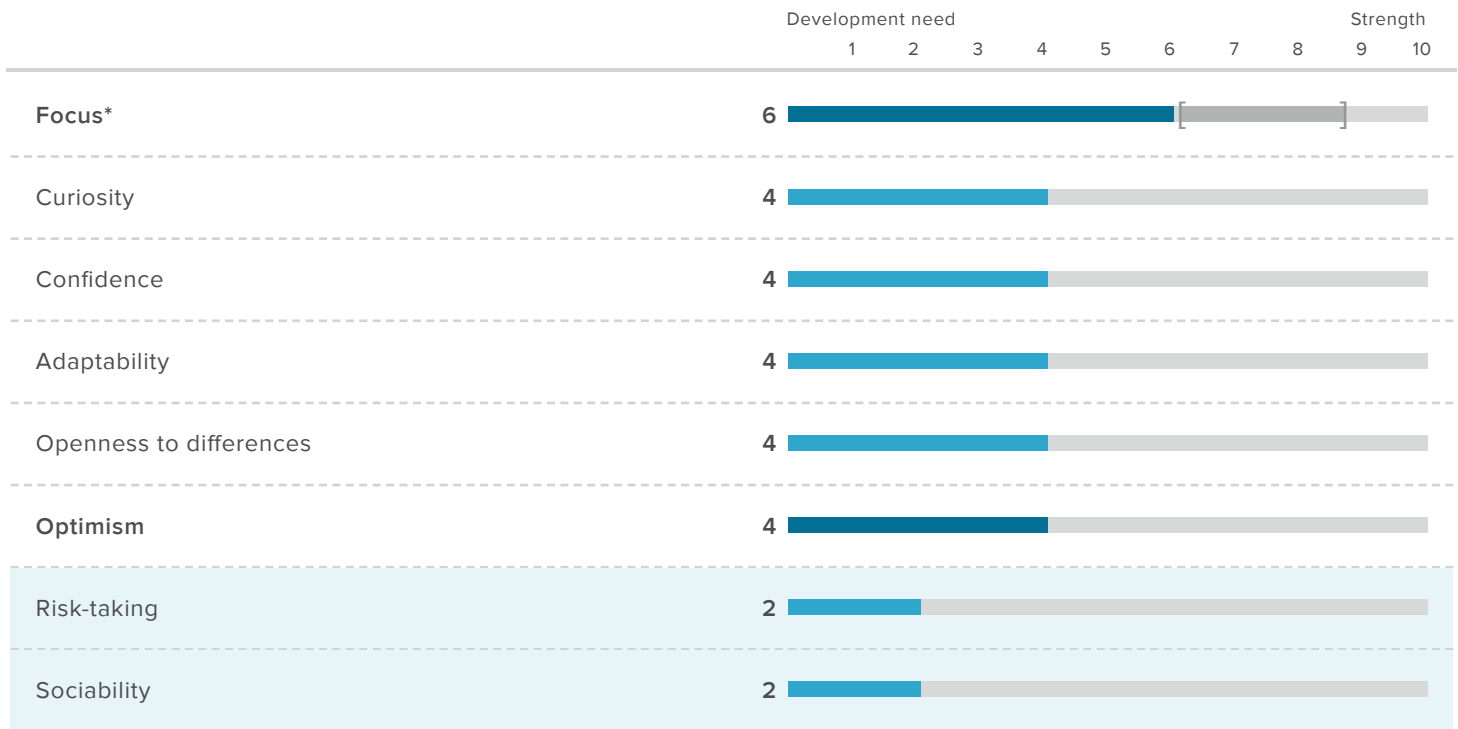

The assessment results show your scores for the success profile traits, as well as for other traits that may support your longer-term development.

*The closer a score is to the ideal range, the less likely it is to be a development need.

DRIVERS

Drivers are the preferences, values, and motivations that influence a person’s career aspirations. They lie at the heart of critical questions: What is important to me? What do I find rewarding? Drivers are informed by who a person is and also by their circumstances or context at any given time. They affect the degree to which certain kinds of opportunities and environments will energize you and spark your interest.

The assessment results show your scores for each driver, and the ideal range for the success profile. The closer a score is to the ideal range, the more it suggests alignment with the success profile.

DEVELOPMENT PLANNING

Your assessment results can help you consider how you typically approach work, reflect on your success in your current situation, and plan your longer-term development for a future role or situation.

This section provides development suggestions for specific capabilities that are likely to support your current role or your aspirations.

KEY STRENGTHS

Insights about your highest scoring capabilities.

KEY DEVELOPMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Insights and development suggestions for your lowest scoring capabilities.

DEVELOPMENT PRIORITIES

Space to identify your development priorities and capture your initial plan.

KEY STRENGTHS

CUSTOMER FOCUS | BEHAVIORAL COMPETENCY

In success profile

Building strong customer relationships and delivering customer-centric solutions.

8

Your assessment indicates you anticipate and meet customer needs and follow up with customers to ensure any problems are resolved.

- Customer focus is one of the easiest skills to develop, and it is common at every level in organizations. For mid-level leaders, it's a skill that is associated with promotion.

OPTIMIZES WORK PROCESSES | BEHAVIORAL COMPETENCY

Supports broader development

Knowing the most effective and efficient processes to get things done, with a focus on continuous improvement.

8

Your assessment indicates you focus on continuously improving processes and methods that maximize the efficiency and effectiveness of the work.

- Optimizes work processes is an especially important skill for first level leaders. It is related to both performance and promotion at that level. Most people are average in this area, and it is moderately difficult to develop.

KEY DEVELOPMENT OPPORTUNITIES

SOCIABILITY | TRAIT

Supports broader development

The natural inclination to engage with and interact with others.

2

Your scores indicate that you may prefer to focus on a few, deeper relationships rather than a broad social network. While the social aspect of work can seem like a luxury, the social connections you make can increase your influence and build people's awareness of you. But you don't have to be an extrovert to be highly effective at building relationships. Being sociable is a reflection of your priorities, which should include putting people at ease, listening closely to others' thoughts and ideas, and taking an active approach to expanding your network of friends and professional connections.

- Seek the company of others. Interacting with others can be draining, especially for people who work long hours and have busy lives. Building relationships can start to feel like work. Focus on what you enjoy most about other people's company and build on that. Find times during your day to engage in small ways. Walk and talk on your way to going to see someone, engage in conversation on the elevator, invite people to lunch or to pick up coffee. Small investments in people add up over time.
- Show warmth. It can be easy to value efficiency over social niceties. But treating people with warmth and regard is a basic form of respect. Find simple ways to make people feel important, valued, and noticed. Use the time at the beginning of a conversation to check in on personal matters. Ask the other person what their thoughts are on a particular subject. Even setting a friendly signature on your e-mail can add a personal touch to a business message.

RISK-TAKING | TRAIT

Supports broader development

A willingness to take a stand or to take chances based on limited information.

2

Your scores indicate that you may take a cautious approach to risk. You may prefer to make decisions in a patient, sure-handed manner, leveraging as much information as possible. However, in an era of rapid change, it's sometimes necessary to take risks in order to achieve what you need to and stay in the game. Sometimes high performance depends on taking risks. It's especially important in an environment where success depends on innovation.

- Think about the worst-case scenario. Some risks are financial, others professional, others are interpersonal. In any of these cases, consider what you are most worried about. Maybe you're worried about being humiliated, losing respect, losing face, or becoming irrelevant. Take your worries to the extreme. Build up your courage by imagining yourself surviving one or more of these worst-case scenarios. If you can survive it, then you can summon the courage to take a substantial risk with a significant potential payoff.
- Recognize that failing some of the time isn't the end of the world. Creativity and innovation are some of the most sought after capabilities and yet they require people and organizations to be comfortable with failure. Being comfortable with failure doesn't mean not caring about failure or minimizing the impact of failure. It also doesn't mean beating yourself up and dwelling on past mistakes. It does mean learning from it and taking those lessons forward.

INSTILLS TRUST | BEHAVIORAL COMPETENCY

Supports broader development

Gaining the confidence and trust of others through honesty, integrity, and authenticity.

4

Your scores suggest that you may make adjustments to your commitments and promises without informing others who are counting on you. You may be seen as someone whose version of a story is adjusted ever so slightly to your advantage. And you may have trouble admitting mistakes or keeping confidences. Building trust with others is at the core of every relationship. It requires you to be honest with yourself and others around you.

- Practice what you preach. Probably nothing chills trust more than a person saying one thing and doing something else. People want consistency. You can say something very convincing one day, but, if the next day you do something that contradicts that, people may no longer buy it. Worse yet, they may question your credibility. Having integrity means representing yourself accurately, knowing who you are, what you believe, and practicing what you preach regardless of the setting. If you're not sure if there's a gap between what you say and what you do, ask someone you trust to give you feedback. Then you can begin to close any gaps.
- Don't exaggerate or overpromise. Does your enthusiasm cause you to commit to too many things? Overpromising and under-delivering is a great way to lose people's trust. Reflect a bit on when and where you tend to exaggerate. Is it under most circumstances or when the pressure's really on? Were you rewarded for it in another setting? Is it serving you well now? Reflect on your patterns and start adjusting your approach. Be authentic—truth carries greater weight than fiction. If you don't know you can get something done for sure, say, "I'll look into it and get back with you when I do."

SELF-DEVELOPMENT | BEHAVIORAL COMPETENCY

Supports broader development

Actively seeking new ways to grow and be challenged using both formal and informal development channels.

4

Your scores suggest that you are comfortable with your current level of skill and may not be motivated to invest a lot of time in developing new skills. You may have a fear of making mistakes that inevitably accompany learning new things. Or perhaps you are unaware of the resources available to you for your development. Those who learn, grow, and change continuously across their careers are the most successful.

- Change your mindset. Some people are natural learners. They always look to learn something new from every situation. Some people are not natural learners. They are more performance oriented—get the job done and move on. Natural learners are more willing to take the risk because they are less worried about how they may be perceived by others. To them, the learning is the outcome. It is less about confidence in their ability and more about growing. You can shift your mindset. You can train yourself to be a learner. But you must be willing to expand your horizon and be curious. Continuously look for opportunities to stretch yourself. See each situation as a learning opportunity.
- Become reflective. People who are good at self-development build time into their schedule to develop from experiences. They seek to achieve results but also look to learn and grow from a situation. After each experience—whether a project, task force, new challenge—reflect. What went well and what didn't? What could you have done differently to achieve a better outcome? What skills were you lacking? Where do you need additional expertise or experience? Take your learning and put it into practice the next time. Add the learning to your development plan. How can you continue to build on it? Use your experience to help drive your future growth. Watch out for the “haven't the time” trap. There's always something that seems more important than reflection.

CULTIVATES INNOVATION | BEHAVIORAL COMPETENCY

Supports broader development

Creating new and better ways for the organization to be successful.

4

Your scores suggest that you likely have very high standards and are less tolerant of experimentation and failure. While proven methods are more of a sure thing, they also limit new methods that allow teams to excel in developing new ideas. Taking risks brings the possibility of breakthroughs.

- Leave perfectionism behind. Being creative is about entering the unknown with curiosity and discovering what happens. Innovation is not about instantly getting it right—it's an ongoing process that calls for making improvements over time. Are you worried about what people may think? Let it go—innovation requires putting risky and untested ideas up for critique. Do you prefer being practical? Creative ideas may seem impractical or far-flung at first, but with experiments and feedback, you can make them unique and workable. Give yourself permission to experiment.
- Immerse yourself and then let go. To come up with creative ideas on your own, begin by immersing yourself in the challenge. Don't rush it—carve out dedicated time. Think out loud with someone who is good at brainstorming and view it from different angles. Search for opportunities in what appear to be obstacles. After an extended period of immersion, take a break. Do something relaxing or different—like taking a walk, a drive, or a nap. While you consciously turn off the challenge, your unconscious mind will continue to process it. The best ideas frequently surface during these times of incubation. Be ready to write or sketch it out when it appears.
